

Collecting Unwanted Enemies and Gaining Good Friends

The true price of speaking one's truths and becoming more well known as a public figure, is that sometimes people come to me and ask me all sorts of things, along the way describing or showing the contents of their minds.

I try to assist them if I can with any info that I know that could possibly be of use to them. Not everyone is asking interesting questions though, or is just curious about themselves and the world, some people have real problems in their lives and are looking for solutions to stop them from suffering.

This is where it gets tricky because there are also some people who contact me that clearly have mental health issues and that need attention and care from a mental well-being specialist, or with medication of some kind.

I can clearly see that they may need help and are suffering, yet I know at the same time that it is exactly because they are unwell that they have not been able to see it is them. So, it's difficult to give assistance to those who cannot understand it, or cannot comprehend what could help them. They know they are suffering but are not aware they have a persecution complex or that they are causing themselves their own suffering.

If I'm saying things straight as they are, it doesn't always land on appreciative ears, or into a mind that understands, so when I say that Elon Musk is not persecuting you or stalking you, I think it's pretty likely a billionaire has better things to do than stalk people. I could be wrong but things like this are part and parcel of being contacted by people seeking advice or help.

I can see why it's a hassle trying to help people in general, because one has to be able to deal with people like this, who are coming to me for advice, I give them advice and then they call me crazy, because I don't think a tech billionaire is chasing them. There are other incidents where people who are still programmed as mind slaves with strong binary programming have also verbally attacked me for not confirming their mental scripts. They accuse me of all sorts of rubbish and downright just make up lies about me. Recently I've noticed that one or two have gone out of their way to say I'm doing this or that to members of the group. Such is the amount of hate or anger in them. It's a pity because I know they are suffering but also know that I cannot help them too. That there are some people too lost to get the correct assistance they need and they are the problem preventing that help for them.

I know there are many people with lost minds out there at the moment and suffering, but I know it's not my job to be their saviour. I can only do what I can only do. I would wish that they come out of suffering of course but thought I'd mention these sorts of things from my side of the picture.

Fortunately, I'm not choosing to assist other people from an egotistical mindset, but rather to do that helping others also assists me, because it feels good when you know you've actually helped someone and they tell you and appreciate you. I'm not doing this for appreciation of others either. I'm assisting others because I've been given the opportunity to do so with the knowledge and skills I've got.

I like being of service to others because I know it is service to self as well. I get pleasure from helping others, because I know that I have made a positive difference in people's lives. They tell me this because things improve for them.

Of course I'm not thinking I can help everyone, as that would be egotistical and arrogant to think this way. But I do know on average I can assist a few, just with info and concepts that they may not have come across yet. Which turn into tools that can possibly get them out of the situations they no longer want to be in.

Of course it comes with the territory that some people will, because of their mind's filter bias, be the opposite and become haters. For some reason they are insulted about truth pointed out about them. They are not able to see that the info is not a criticism of them but more observational about them and has come from a loving place of inquiry and not intrusive. Yet they take it as a personal affront and are offended that I'm looking at the way they are in order to see where their issues are. So, I do have to contend with the odd angry or bitter or twisted mind every now and then that had come to me seeking assistance then rejecting it strongly. I do have to reconcile that there are people out there that will stay lost.

This is part of the Ascension process, when of service to others, one has to have discernment as to whether that person can be able to help themselves or not. That some minds know they need help and reach out, but their own minds then become hostile and defensive and then reject the info that could have helped them. This is the nature of minds that are split or confused, unwell or that are suffering.

I'm still going to have the odd one that is unable to understand my info and then throw it back at me. But I've got thick skin and always been attacked for speaking truths in a toxic slave society that breaks their matrix slave programming rules. All I ask of you is that because people take sides, please ask me first about something someone says about me. It may or may not be true, but if you don't ask me then you would be siding with someone who's not being truthful about me. I prefer it if people ask me if something is true rather than going with someone else's false bias.

I am very grateful for my dear friends who message me and support me, they tell me of the online imposters trying to be me, or the haters spreading hate and lies. So thankfully I have some very good people who look out for me too as I do for them. That's the whole point, to help each other out, to help each other to thrive and come out of suffering. To find self-love and inner peace and shine!

